FAMILY OF KIDNAPING PLOTTER DOUBTS SUICIDE

Declare Marks on Mayo's Body Indicate Force Was Imposed

Gadsden, Ala., March 1—(AP)—Thomas P. Mayo, brother of Fred Mayo who allegedly hanged himself in a Chicago police station cell after admitting a part in the attempted kidnaping of E. P. Adler, today issued a statement declaring he did not believe his brother committed suicide.

The statement also pointed to "certain other unexplained bruises about his face and body" and said the family believed Fred Mayo was "forced into a confession" of his part in the plot.

Mayo declined to say what steps might be taken. He went to Chicago last week and accompanied the body of his brother here last night.

The statement follows:

Brother's Statement

"Members of the family, friends and local physicians who viewed the body of Fred Mayo are in unison as to their expressions as to their doubt regarding his being hanged with his scarf. Every indication points to the conclusion that he was hanged or tortured by a small rope cord or something the size of a window cord.

"It is not believed by the hundreds who viewed the body Wednesday night and Thursday morning that a scarf could possibly have left a mark as was evidenced on his neck.

"There were certain other unexplained bruises about his face and body and it is believed by the family that he was forced into a confession of his part in the plot."

"GENUINE" SAY POLICE

Chicago, Mar. 1 —(AP)—A claim that Fred Mayo, who confessed a part in the "trunk kidnaping" plot against publisher E. P. Adler, did not hang himself was branded as "absurd" today by Captain Albert Mikes, in charge of the 23rd District police.

He said that a statement issued by Mayo's brother, Thomas P. Mayo of Gadsden, which declared that marks indicated Mayo had been tortured with a small cord, were "foolish."

"I was here all the time Mayo was a prisoner," Mikes said, "and no force or violence was used on him. That suicide was real, all right. Two officers who went in to get him to take him to the Detective Bureau found him while his heart was still beating and his body was warm.

Taken To Hospital

"They rushed him to the hospital, but it was too late.

"Two other prisoners, in the cell next to Mayo's heard no activity in Mayo's cell all morning, up to about 20 minutes to 11 o'clock. Then he asked one of them to pass a pencil to him, the prisoner did.

"The two heard some papers rustle, as if Mayo were writing something, and then they didn't hear any more. About 15 minutes later, our two officers found Mayo hanging with his scarf about his neck.

"We thought he had left a note, and we searched his clothes and his cell, but we didn't find anything. I don't need to investigate his brother's claim because I know it isn't true."

To Arraign Lacy

Meanwhile, Police Sergt. Thomas Kelly of the State's Attorney's office announced James Lacy, Mayo's alleged companion in the kidnap plot, probably would be arraigned Friday on charges of assault and attempted kidnaping.

Police squads have been watching two Chicago houses in an attempt to capture two other men reported implicated in the attempt by Lacy. Kelly said Lacy would be arriagned Friday unless that angle of the case developed.

Lacy was being kept under constant survielance at police headquarters. Police feared he might follow Mayo's example and attempt suicide.

Cambridge, Mass., March 1—(AP)—Mrs. Annie Longfellow Thorp, the "Laughing Allegra" of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem, "The Children's Hour," is dead. She was the youngest of the poet's children and was 79 years old.

Years ago her father immortalized her in the lines:

"From my study I see in the lamplight
"Descending the broad hall stair,
"Grave Alice and Laughing Allegra,
"And Edith with golden hair."

Annie Allegra Longfellow married Joseph Gilbert Thorp in 1885. She died yesterday at the family home here. Five daughters and a number of grandchildren survive.

"Sea Monster" is Body of Rare Bottle Nose Whale

Cherbourg, France, Mar. 1 —(AP)—A "sea monster" found on the beach here today was identified by Professor Corbierre, eminent scholar of natural history, as a rare form of hyperoodon—in plain language a bottle-nosed whale.

Strange, unwhalelike contours on the mammal were found on close inspection to be the result of the wear and tear of rocks as the carcass washed to shore.

Professor Corbierre expressed belief the "monster" came from the North Sea, as it is not a native of Channel regions. Fishermen in this region had never seen anything like it.

A gaping crowd of Norman coastal folk came to witness the curiosity as word of it spread like wildfire.

It was described as being 25 feet long and four and one-half feet in diameter, with a thin neck, three feet long and a head like that of a camel.

As if those peculiarities weren't enough, the creature was said to have two lateral swimming fins, in addition to the tail. Moreover, it was covered with white hair.

There was a rush to attempt the task of identification because the decomposed condition of the body aroused fear it might lose its scientific value unless studied soon.

YOUNG FIREBUG TO BE GIVEN A COURT HEARING

Springfield Judge to Go Into Complex Case March 10

Springfield, Ill., Mar. 1 —(AP)—Cecil Kiper, 10, probably won't go to the reform school.

Governor Horner and a dozen other state and local officials are still undecided about what should be done with the lad, who has been held in custody since he confessed responsibility for the $900,000 fire that destroyed the state arsenal February 18.

County Judge O. B. Irwin has scheduled for March 10 a hearing into the complex questions.

State psychiatrists, studying young Cecil's background and his delight in fire have declared that he should not be sent to the St. Charles School for Boys, but to an institution or home where he would have proper guidance and care.

Meanwhile the boy is held in the county detention home, but next week he will go to the hospital for a tonsil and dental operation.

Abolition Grand Juries in Cook County is Sought

Chicago, March 1—(AP)—A tentative plan to be presented at the regular session of the legislature early next year moving for the elimination of grand juries in Illinois, was announced by Henry Barrett Chamberlin, managing director of the Chicago Crime Commission.

Chamberlin said yestyerday that Gov. Henry Horner had been asked to include the grand jury matter in his call of the present special session, but that the question was shelved to make room for discussion of other important matters.

Ten of the 11 judges now sitting in the Criminal Court here went on record as favoring elimination of the present grand jury system, Judge George Fred Rush announcing the only contrary views.

FOUR MEMBERS OF FAMILY DIE IN FIRE TODAY

Tenement Houses in Brooklyn Fuel of Flames Today

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 1—(AP)—Four members of one family were killed and a fifth critically burned in a tenement house fire early today.

Two alarms were sounded as the flames swept a five-story tenement, which is located in Carroll street. The fire quickly spread to an adjoining tenement house.

The dead were listed as:

Walter Galazzi, one year old; Joseph, six; Stephen, nine, and Rose, 31.

Angel Galazzi 13, was seriously burned.

Boy May Die

Physicians at Long Island College hospital held little hope for the burned boy's recovery.

The fire was discovered about 3 A. M., by Matthew Stanzionne, who lives on the fourth floor. He rushed to the street, awakening other tenants. The stairway to the fifth floor was ablaze and they were unable to warn the Gallazzi family, who were trapped as they slept.

Firemen, smashing their way into the Galazzi family's apartments, found the bodies. The head of the family, a street sweeper, was not at home and police could not reach him immediately.

OFFICERS KEEP LOOKOUT TODAY FOR FIVE GIRLS

One of Them Thought to Have Taken $600 of Dad's Money

Chicago, Mar. 1 —(AP)— Police were on the lookout today for five missing girls, one of whom they said they believed had taken $600 of her father's money.

Three of the girls are Mary Ella Stuart and Margaret Egbers, both 15, elementary school students, and Amelia Wandpluh, 14, high school student. Police said the money was missing from the trunk of the Wandpluh girl's father.

Friends and relatives of the girls said they believed they started for New York, Colorado of Eagle River, Wis., where the Wandpluh girl has relatives.

Classmates at the Jennings Seminary for Girls at Aurora expressed the opinion that Marjorie Swift 18, and Mary Dickinson, 16, who have been missing from the institution since Sunday, are hiking to Hollywood. The students said the two had frequently discussed the possibility of successful motion picture careers.

SIX-HOUR DAY ON RAILROADS BY LAW URGED

Senate Committee is Told It Would Relieve Idleness

Washington, Mar. 1—(AP)—Enactment of the Black bill making six hours the measure of a full day's pay for railroad workers was urged before the Senate Interstate Commerce committee today by A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Railway Labor Executive Association.

Representatives of the managements were to be heard later in opposition.

Whitney said 800,000 railroad workers still were out of employment and 400,000 more were working only part time. Workers are entitled to a whole day's pay for six hours and overtime for additional work because of their increased productive efficiency, he testified.

He pointed out the NRA principles do not apply to the railroads and said shorter hours for this industry would be the most "important pillar" in the system of distributing work.

Springfield, Ill., Mar. 1 —(AP)—Because of the loss of records in the state arsenal fire, 75 caretakers of federal Army equipment will not receive their pay today.

The caretakers will go payless until a check of records at Washington, Adjutant General Carlos E. Black said today, to determine names and amounts due.

The workers affected are in charge of animals, ordinance, and motor equipment of the federal government. The check will probably not be completed for a month, Gen. Black said.

Federal employes in Urbana, Rockford, Galesburg, Monmouth, Maywood, Chicago and Springfield are among those affected.

Administration supporters contended the legislation as passed by the Senate "emasculated" the economy program and was unacceptable to President Roosevelt. How far he would go in compromise efforts was not made known.

Three Wild Horses Give St. Clair Co. Officers a Problem

East St. Louis, Ill., Mar. 1—(AP)—The St. Clair County Humane Society is perplexed over what to do about three wild horses galloping about the county.

WAR SECRETARY CALLS HOUSE'S PLANS "INSANE"

Hits at Committee's Proposal for New Army Airplanes

Washington, March 1—(AP)—Secretary Dern smocked a "beyond any sane estimate" label today across congressional plans for a wide expansion of Army aviation.

The War Department and its one-time traditional ally, the House Military Affairs committee, thereupon broke off friendly relations. The committee promptly prepared a comeback of its own.

Dern singled out for attack two bills introduced by Chairman McSwain, one of which would give the Army 4,584 new planes. In a statement to the committee he termed them "one-sided," "partisan" and even prompted by self-interest."

"The first of these two bills," he said, "would provide an air force so far beyond any sane estimate of our defensive needs, and so costly, that its passage could be continued by the world only an evidence either or ardent militarism, or immediate war."

Asked to Parley

McSwain forthwith invited the War Secretary to come up and tell his committee about it. He added: "The committee has several times requested Secretary Dern to appear before it and explain his attitude, but he has never come. We are still ready to have him appear at his convenience."

McSwain said he would apply all possible pressure to have the House adopt today a resolution to authorize a committee investigation of all Army procurement methods. The committee would hire special investigators.

Meanwhile, a grand jury investigation into Army contracts decided to run into its fourth consecutive week after new but undisclosed evidenec was placed before it. Lobbyist offers of millions and whispers of pending indictments have gone undenied.

Gold-Laying Hen Has Real Rival in Herrin Chick

Herrin, Ill., March 1—(AP)—The legendary hen that laid the golden egg has a rival in Herman Zuber's rhode island red.

Zuber says it's nothing for his hen to step out and lay two eggs at one setting. The hen's real accomplishment, Zuber says and is backed up by his neighbors, was on February 19, when she broke her own record by laying three eggs. One egg was full sized and the other two about half size.

The hen was hatched in the spring of 1932 and has been petted and watched by Zuber ever since. When Zuber goes to bed, he first makes sure his hen is safely tucked away.

Zuber, who lives at Herrin, is a former brew master. He came from Murphysboro where he was employed in a brewery in the pre-Volstead days.

STATE PLANNING AN ADDITION TO STATEVILLE NOW

Prison There and at Joliet are Both Overcrowded

Springfield, Ill., March 1—(AP)—A. L. Bowen, Director of Public Welfare, today announced that preliminary plans are being made for construction of an addition to Stateville penitentiary at Joliet.

Expansion is necessary to prevent further overcrowding of the Stateville and Joliet prisons, Bowen said.

"At the present time there are 3,627 prisoners in Stateville, the normal capacity of which is only 3,000, and the old prison, built to house not more than a thousand inmates, now has a population of 1,782," Bowen said.

"These figures indicate the imperative necessity for an early program of expansion at Stateville. A new unit should be erected there to accommodate at least 1,500 prisoners at the start, with provision for taking care of an additional thousand when required."

One suggestion under consideration is to use the west Stateville wall as the beginning of a new enclosure.

HAD CLOSE CALL

DR. WYNEKOOP'S APPEARANCE ON STAND EXPECTED

Will Probably Testify in Murder Case Later in Day

Criminal Courts Building, Chicago, Mar. 1 —(AP)— The dramatic climax of the celebrated Wynekoop murder trial, neared today as it was announced that Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop probably would take the stand in her own defense before the close of the day's session.

The announcement was made by W. W. Smith, defense attorney, at the noon recess. Previously defense counsel had said that it was unlikely that she would be called before tomorrow, but at the urging of Judge Harry B. Miller, the questioning of character witnesses was shortened.

Dr. Catherine, 25-year-old daughter of the defendant, was to precede her on the stand.

Character Witnesses

A steady stream of character witnesses passed through the witness box in the morning session, all testifying that Dr. Wynekoop enjoyed a good reputation in the community. Among them were Paul H. Mueller, publisher of the Abenpost, Chicago German language newspaper; Marianna Bugg., a masseuse, who said that she had frequenty massaged Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, the daughter-in-law for whose slaying Dr. Wynekoop is on trial; and Dr. Perry Ross, who testified that he had been given a cot in the Wynekoop home while studying to be a physician.

Courtroom Crowded

The possibility that the accused slayer would make her long awaited appearance in the witness box brought out hordes of court fans and the curious. The 250 seats in the courtroom were filled almost immediately upon opening of the doors, and the three rows of chairs along the wall within the court railing had become four.

"I am ready," she said. "I must go ahead and prove my innocence. There cannot be a question of physical ability."

Clipping out her words with emphasis, Dr. Wynekoop thus expressed her determination to "see the trial through," despite a court session yesterday that left her weak—and for a time in tears.

Tears During Recess

The tears came during a recess after her eldest son, Walker, had testified that he had waited for eight hours outside a police station door while the police subjected his mother to indignities before they got her to sign a statement of accidenally killing Rheta as she lay on an operating table in the doctor's basement surgery.

"Oh it's been terrible,' Dr. Wynekoop cried. "I never realized until now what a terrible night poor Walker had. How he stood it is more than I can understand."

Other witnesses testified that Dr. Alice had always shown affection for Rheta and was so situated financially that she had no dire need for the $12,000 insurance placed on Rheta's life a month prior to her death.

ROCK FALLS MAN SERIOUSLY HURT IN CRASH TODAY

Leslie Propheter in Dixon Hospital as Result of Crash

Leslie Propheter, aged 24, 514 Dixon avenue, Rock Falls, was rushed to the Katherine Shaw Bethea hospital at noon today, suffering from severe injuries sustained in an automobile crash which occurred about 12 o'clock near the Walker school, about six miles southwest of Dixon. L. L. Kizer and family who reside on a farm northeast of Harmon were occupants of the second car and while they were considerably shaken up and their car damaged, none of the family was seriously injured.

Mr. Kizer was driving north and Propheter was said to have been going east at a road intersection. The cars collided at the intersection of the two roads, Propheter's coupe spinning around and then turning over on its side. In some manner, Propheter was thrown out of his car which turned over, pinning him underneath.

Kizer, and others who arrived on the scene shortly after the crash, succeeded in lifting the car off his body. The Kizer car crashed into a pole but was only slightly damaged. Mr. Kizer placed the injured man in his car and rushed him to the local hospital and then notified the sheriff's office where he made a report of the accident. At the hospital this afternoon it was reported that Propheter appeared to be quite seriously injured and was suffering from severe shock. It was thought that he had sustained a fractured collar bone and that several ribs were broken.

Three Soldiers, Turned Bank Robbers, Matched Marksmanship With Sheriff and Lost

Plattsmouth, Neb., March 1—(AP)—Three soldiers accused of trying their hand at bank robbery matched gunplay with a sharpshooting Deputy Sheriff, with this result:

One soldier killed.

Two soldiers captured.

Police said that Clyde A. Durham, John R. Langston and John C. Scislowski, all soldiers from Fort Crook, near Omaha, entered the Plattsmouth State Bank late yesterday intent on robbing it.

Deputy J. E. Lancaster heard about it. He stepped into the bank with his gun out of sight. Durham, known as a crack shot, fired, police said. He missed. Lancaster pulled out his gun and fired. Durham fell dead, a bullet through his heart.

Then the Deputy Sheriff fired again. The bullet hit Langston in the arm. He and Scislowski jumped through a rear window and ran. A short time later a posse came upon them in a garage and seized them without a fight.

Lindbergh's Father Proved to be Prophet by Publication of Book Uncle Sam Suppressed

Philadelphia, Mar. 1 —(AP)—The late Charles A. Lindbergh, Sr., Minnesota Congressman and father of the famous flier, speaks today through a book which was suppressed by the government during the World War.

Entitled "Your Country at War," the elder Lindbergh's work is described by the publishers who brought it out today as prophetic. In its attacks on war-time hysteria, profiteers, bankers and giant monopolies, the volume makes predictions and recommendations which have materialized in the years since the Representative's death in 1924.

"The book even predicts use of a plan almost dentical with the NRA," says an introduction by the author's former law partner W. E. Quigley of Minneapolis. "The Pecora investigations of big bankers and high finance are revealing things in 1933 and 1934 that were foretold by Lindbergh in 1917."

But in 1918 government agents raided the Washington print shop where the book was published, seized available copies and ordered the plates destroyed.

A few copies which had already left the shop were sent to Minnesoto and used in Representative Lindbergh's campaign for Governor. They bore the title, "Why is Your Country at War?"

The answer given by Lindbergh was the domination of "special privilege."

MILK PRICE

Due to prevailing unusual conditions, it is impractical for the Borden Company to announce in advance the price it will pay for fluid milk delivered and accepted.

Therefore, until further notice, the price for fluid milk will not be announced until after said milk is delivered and accepted. The price will be published within five (5) days after the period for which the company will have heretofore announced the price in advance.

Mouthings of Hounds

The mouthings of fox hounds differ as much as do the voices of men. These different mouthings are classified by the hunters, and each hunter has his own ideas about which kind is best. If a hunter says a dog has a "chop mouth," he means that it is a short, shrill bark, and this "chop" may be a "long chop" or a "short chop." A "squealing mouth" is a long, quavering cry. The "long mouth" is a prolonged bark. The "calking mouth" has a sound like hammer blows, "calk, calk, calk," in quick short barks. The "horn mouth" is like the melodious blast of a bugle and the "turkey mouth" is a shrill barking.

Neurocalometer Service
It is vitally essential in the successful treatment of nervous diseases to be able to find the exact location of the nerve or nerves affected. The Neurocalometer is a very precise, delicate instrument created through research, for that purpose. Not only is it capable of locating the precise nerve involved, but also it is able to show when the trouble has been removed. The Neurocalometer examination is as vital to nerve conditions as is the X-ray to bone and deep tissue examinations. You owe it to yourself to have this test made.

GOVERNMENT OF SPAIN WALKED OUT EARLY TODAY

Resignation of the Entire Cabinet Surprise to Whole Country

Madrid, Mar. 1—(AP)—The entire government of Premier Alejando Lerroux resigned suddeny today.

Reorganization of the ministry had been considered last night by Premier Lerroux after it was announced that two ministers—Diego Martinez Barrios of the Department of the Interor, and Minister of the Treasury Gomez Lara—planned to resign.

However, the resignation of the entire cabinet, reorganized on Jan. 23, came as a surprise move.

When Lerroux went to the private residence of President Nicato Alcala Zamora early today, it was believed he had gone to present the resignations of Martinez Barrios and Lara.

A short time later came the announcement of the complete walkout.

These two had threatened to quit when the largest minority supporting party, the Catholic Agrarian action of 117 deputies, reached a decision to oppose government policies.

Many believed this group might withdraw from its stand provided the two ministers stepped out of the government.

It was explained that with Martinez Baarrios and Lara out, Agrarian leaders believed they would be able to put through two of their projects—amnesty for certain political prisoners and subsidies for the rural clergy.

Supplies will soon be on the way as his signal was answered by the tug Mexpet and the information passed on to the Lighthouse Service. The tug could not get in to the lighthouse because of ice, but worked its way close enought to get the information by signaling.

Frozen Boots!

LITTLE AMERICA, ANTARCTICA, Feb. 12 (via Mackay Radio)—Believe it or not, we are still hauling supplies from the scattered caches on the ice into Little America and, according to my boss, Commander Noville, we shall be at it for a total of three weeks or more. I am actually living in a little tent out by Pressure Camp and I'm looking forward to getting into one of those warm snow-buried wooden huts in Little America that isn't in danger of being blown away by the wind.

Speaking of wind, we've got plenty of it and they tell me this is only a beginner. We are reaching the end of our summer season down here and the boys tell me it is nice and balmy. I wouldn't know that. The thermometer says fifteen degrees below zero and a biting wind sends the cold right through our veins. There are 51 of us working on the ice and already we are watching each other's faces for signs of frost bite. If we see a small white dot appear on another fellow's nose we run up to him and help him to rub it with snow to restore the circulation. Frostbite is no fun under our circumstances and Dr. Shirey has been busy fighting it with us, but now he is gone. Illness forced him to quit the Expedition and he is on his way back to New Zealand on the Jacob Ruppert. We'll miss him. We understand the research ship, Discovery II, is bringing us another doctor who will be transferred to the Bear at Oakland and brought here to spend the next year or so with us on the ice. Then the Bear will have to run out of here to New Zealand before the Ross Sea freezes again, so we'll be left all alone for twelve months. I wonder—about a lot of things!

W. S. McCormack our autogyro pilot

In addition to my job of segregating the many types of fuel and oil for the various airplanes, tractors and snowmobiles, as they require it, I am now helping in the distribution of parts for all these machines. Gosh, I didn't know there was so much work in the world! The only water we have is heated snow, so even the sketchy washing of hands and face and shaving are priceless luxuries. Bathing is out of the question. Later, when we get indoors we'll clean ourselves with cold cream. I never realized what a wonderful song that was, "Gee How I Hate To Get Up In The Morning." It is a miserable feeling crawling out of a warm sleeping bag into a temperature of ten below zero and finding your boots frozen solid so you have to beat them against the tent pole to soften them up before you can put them on and thus get your feet in out of the weather. No yawning or stretching. Once awake and out of your nest and you have to move fast.

Al Carbonne, the cook, is having a picnic trying to feed us properly. Working under tremendous difficulties, with only a single three-burner gasoline stove to prepare five meals every 24 hours for 51 men, he is performing miracles. But we must eat fast. The food turns stone cold in two or three minutes and freezes solid in ten. Out on the trail we have thermos bottles of hot cocoa. You can bet I am very careful to keep that stove supplied with the proper gasoline.

We are working day and night at top speed to get our supplies to Little America before the bay ice and barrier ice feet break off. There is a considerable crisis of this kind now at Pressure Ridge but, with luck, we'll beat it.

I'm delighted at the radio news that these disconnected, hurried little yarns of mine are proving interesting and are running in hundreds of newspapers and that my club is growing so fast. They tell me that high school teachers in history, science and geography are enrolling their entire classes and studying the stories with the working maps every week. That's swell! The more the merrier. We welcome as members, without any cost whatever, all people interested in aviation, adventure and exploration who send in a self-addressed stamped envelope to C. A. Abele, Jr., president, Little America Aviation and Exploration Club, Hotel Lexington, 48th Street and Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Y. and the club staff will send them all a membership card and a big map of the South Polar region.

PASSENGERS ON POLISH STEAMER ARE TAKEN OFF

Fifty Rescued from a Vessel Near End in Wild Sea

Helsingfors, Finland, March 1—(AP)—All fifty of the passengers aboard the Polish steamer Zieszys, dangerously near sinking in violent seas near Macelliott Island, were taken off the stricken vessel early today by a salvage ship.

The salvage steamer Juaeaekarha, which effected the rescue, had reported hours earlier by wireless that she had reached the neighborhood of the Zieszys, but was unable to pull alongside because of high seas.

SOS Calls Flashed

SOS calls were flashed from the vessel and rockets were fired when she struck the rocks last night. Later, wireless messages said the Zieszys was in a critical position, a hole in her hull, the engine room flooded and the engines stopped.

Other messages told of attempts by the crew to launch lifeboats in the darkness which came with the extinguishing of all lights after the stoppage of auxiliaries.

Ice-breakers and other steamers plowed through the heavy seas, joining the salvage steamer in the race to the scene of the wreck.

Several Estonian athletes on their way to Helsingfors were among the passengers.

Uncle Sam Takes Over Relief Work in North Dakota

Washington, March 1—(AP)—The federal government today took over control of relief activities in North Dakota because, Harry L. Hopkins, the Administrator, said, politicial contributions had been collected from employes of the state relief administration.

Hopkins, in a telegram to Governor William Langer, charged contributions were used for the Governor's political purposes.

Judge A. M. Christianson was named to act as Relief and Civil Work administrator in the state.

Mrs. Ickes Discusses Important Work, A Part of the Program

(Mrs. Anna Wilmart Ickes, a member of the Illinois House of Representatives and wife of Secretary Harold Ickes of the Interior Department, is co-sponsor of a series of low cost housing-slum clearance bills before the third special session of the Illinois Legislature. In the following article Mrs. Ickes discusses the importance of this work, which is part of the Federal public works program administered by Secretary Ickes.)

By MRS. ANNA WILMART ICKES
(Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press)

Springfield, Ill., March 1—(AP)—Only recently has the United States recognized and accepted its responsibility in the direction of low cost housing and slum clearance.

We have always lamented the existence of slum areas in our cities, but we somehow felt that the unsightly conditions were due to the people who lived in them, as possibly, in part, they are.

Many of us remember the time when he heard the dictium, "at least they might be clean," and that other one, "he who would eat must work." Slum dwellings with insufficient water supply have put the first one out of date, and the unemployment situation has sent the second after it. Cleanliness has become a luxury and unemployment by no means confined to the idle.

* * *

Erstwhile residential districts were encroached upon by industrial plants. Smoke polluted the air and industrial wastes polluted the streams, and the original residents moved away. Under-privileged folk moved into the decaying buildings, and so slums grew as cities grew and became the breeding places of crime and disease, and people said "too bad" and passed by on the other side.

But disease and crime are no respecters of invisible lines and as they crept across the borders into other districts, dwellers in those districts, from motives of self protection if from no higher impetus, began to take notice. Public health and social security demanded that blighted areas be investigated and cleaned up.

* * *

With this new sense of responsibility appeared a new nomenclature. We hear of "slum clearance," "demolition programs," "blighted areas," and "responsibility of our low-salaried classes."

England awakened earlier than did the United States to this new call, and at the close of the war set itself to provide a decent home for every returned soldier. How England went to work is shown in the figures which state that in fifteen years over one million low cost homes have been provided with financial assistance from the government. Three quarters of these have been built by local public bodies. A million more housing accommodations have been provided without governmental assistance

* * *

England is now working on a five year program for slum clearance which calls for the demolition of 210,000 houses and a quarter of a million new dwellings to be built.

Holland has faced this problem with the astonishing result that nearly one seventh of the population has been rehoused with governmental aid. In Vienna over sixty thousand dwellings have been built for the wage earners in the very lowest brackets.

These facts are interesting because they show that the hundred million dollars allocated in the United States for low cost housing operations by the Federal government, even with the additional money to be lent to private building companies, is by no means the extravagant and unprecedented outlay that it appears to some people uninformed as to what other countries are finding it wise to do.

NO RED—WITHOUT THE WHITE AND BLUE

(Prin. Ernest E. Cole, Agassiz School, Chicago)

THERE'S no other land like my land,
Beneth the shining sun;
There's no other flag like my flag,
In all the world—not one;
One land, one tongue, and one people,
To one flag loyal, true—
No red shall wave o'er my fair land
Without the white and blue.

There's grandeur in my land's mountains,
Contentment in her vales;
There's wealth in her broad prairies,
There's freedom in her gales.
In my land all men are equal,
Her flag proclaims it, too—
No red shall wave o'er my fair land
Without the white and blue.

There's majesty in Old Glory,
Hope in each stripe and star;
It heralds freedom, liberty,
To nations, near and far;
Unsullied and triumphant,
Glorified, she floats anew—
No red shall wave o'er my fair land
Without the white and blue.

RULE BY ARTILLERY.

Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria, aided by French money and Italian artillery munitions, apparenty has succeeded in suppressing about two-thirds of the public opinion in his country. The Austrians are socialists of the non-militant type. They had succeeded in establishing a system whereby those who wished to be socialists could follow that conviction, and those who professed capitalism could do so. In keeping with the Viennese tradition of good nature and tolerance, there had developed a situation which has about as good as it could be in poverty-stricken Austria. Dollfuss was not particularly interested in keeping Austria capitalist. He was not interested in keeping it from going socialistic, or in anything except keeping it anti-German and pro-French. So the argument about the merits of socialism need not be renewed here.

The astonishing thing about the Dollfuss feat of suppressing an uprising of two-thirds of the people is the way he went about it. He made no effort to remedy the economic situation which had caused so much bitterness. He permitted the use of artillery. If he had been defending his constitution, or upholding human rights against a mere mob, he might have gained some sympathy. But he was upholding France by shooting his countrymen.

There was an English king, John, who was beaten to his knees by public opinion and forced to acceed to the Magna Charta for somewhat less than Dollfuss has done. Another English king, Charles I, came to an unpleasant end for anti-social tactics. Danton, Robespierre and Marat came to violent ends, two of them by public execution because they could not learn the same lesson they had taught their king by cutting off his head. Marie Antoinette, the widow of Louis XVI, whose playful indifference to public affairs had helped ruin her royal husband's neck, also went to the chopping block. Czar Nicholas of Russia, whose lack of statesmanship and enterprise foisted bolshevism upon the world, was another example of rule by artillery. The czarina, who might have henpecked her husband into action, was shot down with him in the dirty basement at Ekaterinburg, even though she was his intellectual superior. Napoleon, eaten alive by cancer and rats on St. Helena, could give Dollfuss some pointers if he were alive today. Alfonso, recently king of Spain, spends his time in exile, subject to execution if he returns to his home. George III of England muffed the opportunity to hold the colonies and build the British empire into a self-contained state or group of commonwealths that would have been a stabilizing power today. Mary queen of Scots, was not immune to the stroke of a common woodsman's ax, and ex-President Machado of Cuba spends his time in exile and his fortune on bodyguards because he lacked the skill to play the game of statesmanship.

This procession of "corpses," headless politically or physically, should parade through the chambers of the Austrian dictator. They tell him their lesson. That intelligent peope are not to be ruled by artillery.

WHO WANTS CHICAGO?

Representative Clinton Searle has introduced in the house of representatives at Springfield a resolution proposing that a commossion be appointed to ascertain sentiment concerning division of Illinois into two states.

While the resolution does not assert that Cook county should constitute a state in itself, it is predicated on the theory that there is lack of common purposes between the thickly settled metropolitan area and the rest of the state, and that this conflict is keeping the general assembly in session most of the time.

Chicago newspapers are prone to take in adjoining counties as units with interests common to Chicago, but bitterest opposition to Chicago control lies in those counties closest to Cook. There is no indication that any group of counties in northern Illinois would consent to being marooned from old associates and to being absorbed by Chicago government.

In the last constitutional convention the strongest advocates of limited representation for Chicago in the general assembly came from Kane and Will and Kankakee counties, the very counties that would be included in the event of any additions to Cook county in a separate state. The proposal would be reduced to a mere separation of Cook county into a state of itself.

Many persons in Cook county, those who feel a restraint from downstate, might favor such change, but there are many more who are in favor of the kind of restraint that downstate exercises upon Chicago. Thousands of Chicagoans migrated to the city from downstate counties, and while they may pride themselves upon metropolitan ideas and may affect an anti-rural taste, the fact remains that the family roots of such persons are in downstate counties, villages, and cities.

If we are going to divide ourself up, why not create three states.—Cook, Illinois, and Egypt?

There is an excess of at least 85,000 feeble churches (in the U. S.) which are unable to support the full-time services of either a trained or an untrained minister.—Report of Institute of Social and Religious Research of N. Y.

The friendly partridge said, "Well, son, if you are looking for some fun, I'll gladly let you use my set of drumsticks for a while.

"Just stand close by and make them thump against this hollow wooden stump. I'll bet the way you will perform will make the others smile."

"Well, I have done a lot of stunts," said Windy, "So, I'll try it once. Just let me take two drumsticks. I am sure I can't swing four.

"Then, everybody stand far back. The stump will get a good hard whack. I fear 'twill hurt somebody's ears, the way I'll make it roar."

* * *

The Tinies smiled and Scouty said, "We're going to stay right here, instead. We know you are not strong enough to bother us one bit."

Then Windy gaily drummed away and shortly he heard Goldy say, "Why I can hardly hear a sound, the way you're doing it."

All of a sudden Duncy cried, "Hey, look! There's some strange thing inside that stump. I saw its little nose. Go on, and pound some more."

So Windy did. This time the sound sent something scampring 'cross the ground. "Why, it's a chipmunk," Dotty cried. "What is it running for-"

* * *

Ol' Nick replied, "It's scared, no doubt. Let's follow it and we'll find out." They saw it run into a hole and then come out again.

This time it held a little flute, and shortly it began to toot. And then a baby chipmunk came out of the chipmunk's den.

The big one soon began to play. The Tinies then heard kind Nick say, "Come on, there, little chippy. do a chipmunk dance for me.

"I've seen you do your dance before. Now, make the Tinies cheer and roar." The chipmunk started dancing and 'twas cute as it could be.

The Tinies meet ol' Goofy Grasshopper in the next story.)

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Devotion

THURSDAY, March 1
(Read Luke XVIII:35-43)
"What Wilt Thou?"

In our prayers we ought to come promptly to the point. The eyes of the mind should be fixed on some definite object. If the goal is lost in a fog how can we reach it? Rambling prayers do not find God. When we ask for blessings in general we get nothing in particular. Our desires should be so definite that they can clothe themselves in words. Putting a desire into words sharpens the mind and strengthens the will. In praying for people, we should name them. This gives them flesh and blood. Praying for deliverance from sin in general, is futile. Only when we pray to be saved from some particular sin which is spoiling our life does salvation arrive. We gain nothing by praying for virtues in general. It is some specific virtue deeply longed for which will come in answer to prayer. Vagueness puts out the fire in the heart. One of Jesus favorite questions was, "What wilt thou that I do unto thee?" In other words, "What do you wish? Name it or I can do mighty work."

Prayer: Help us, O Lord, to seek with our whole heart the thing we ask for and save us from faint and wandering desires. Help us to concentrate our strength each day upon some one blessing without which we shall be undone. When Thou askest "What wilt thou?" may our answer be swift and clear. Amen.

THE BREAKFAST TABLE
By Dr. Joseph Fort Newton

Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote a wise and witty book, called "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table". It is just good talk written down in a spirit of comradeship, chummy, chatty, charming.

But today, if such a gentle sovereign tried to rule, he would be a king without a realm. If he had time to talk there would be few, if any, to listen. His family would not be up. Or they would come straggling in one by one, yawning and snappy of temper.

No one talks much at breakfast any more. We snatch our coffee and toast on our way to catch a train, which catapults us into the rush and work of the day, headlong and in a hurry. At night we dash back to spend the evening "doing something", as we say, which usually means going to a party or into pictures, to fill the empty hours.

Fewer and fewer are the quiet evenings spent by the fireside, as in days of old. Either the world is let in by radio, or the family is let out by auto. But seldom together; each goes his own way at his own gait—until recently, in his own car.

The result is disruptive, and the unity of the home is broken. Each member of the family claims the right to live his or her own life. Each lives in his own world, lured by his own interests. It is seldom they are united except at a wedding or a funeral.

My picture may be exaggerated but it shows what is going on. The modern home is a dormitory and a restaurant; a place to sleep, with meals at all hours. There is little time to knit mind to mind; little opportunity to adjust moral relationships. It is the spirit of the age and it tells terribly on the home.

It is a stage, a phase due to new conditions of life, but it is attended by pain, suffering, and danger. If we let the home go, everything goes. We must put our house in order, if we are to have order in the city. We must recondition the home! It is the foundation of society, its sanctuary, its haven, its hope!

FIGHTING INFANTILE PARALYSIS—I

The reader of newspapers witnesses these days the slow but certain progress being made in the conquest of poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis.

It is only in recent years that we have begun to appreciate what a terrible disease infantile paralysis is. The great epidemic of 1916 in New York City impressed upon us our helplessness in the face of it.

Through much labor we established the fact that the disease is caused by a filtrable virus, by a living organism too small to be seen under our most powerful microscope.

This demonstration of the cause of poliomyelitis was the first essential step in the control of the condition. In various laboratories it was shown by experimentation on animals that the virus is actually present in the nervous system of the afflicted, and that when this virus is transmitted from one suitable animal to another the disease develops.

Later it was found that those individuals who had recovered from infantile paralysis possessed in their blood something which had a neutralizing effect upon the virus of poliomyelitis.

When virus known to be sufficient to cause infantile paralysis in a monkey was mixed with the serum taken from the blood of an individual who had recovered from infantile paralysis, it did not produce the disease when injected into the experimental animal.

Evidently, then, the blood taken from the recovered patient could overcome the disease-producing qualities of the virus. The use of infantile paralysis immune serum in the treatment of polio patients during the last epidemic was based upon these observations.

Opinion is divided as to the effectiveness of the treatment of suspected cases with immune serum. But even so, medicine is not satisfied with cures where prevention is possible.

1933-34 Commercial basket ball league schedule, a pair of games were played in the high school gymnasium last evening. In the initial contest the Illinois Northern Utilities Company team continued its march toward the season's championship with a 32-10 verdict over the Beier Loafers. The Millway Hatchery dropped its first game of the third round to Ashton by a 15-12 count.

The weekly cage attraction will continue next Wednesday evening with the Loafers meeting the Battery Shop and the Hatchery and I. N, U. Co., teams performing in the second session.

Wasting little time the I. N. U. Co., hoped off to a 7-0 lead in the first quarter last night. They made it 13-6 at the intermission and put the game on ice in the third stage with a 12 point splurge for a 25-8 score. The final was a 32-10 romp for the league leaders. Kennedy and Joyce led the scoring with 11 and 10 points respectively. The Loafers were headed by Underwood's four scores.

Ashton and the Hatchery engaged in another of these rough and tumble low scoring battles which has been almost a weekly feature this season. The boys played a 4-4 first quarter but Ashton grabbed a lead of 11-6 at the half. Neither five accomplished much in the next period, the total being 11-8. Ashton counted two baskets in the final minutes to win 15-12. Seven points by Obourn led the scorers. Plowman headed the losers with six scores. The results of the games were as follows:

McGraw's Body Now Rests in Baltimore

Baltimore, March 1—(AP)—John Joseph McGraw is home. His body lay today in a granite vault at Bonnie Brae, new cathedral cemetery where it awaits burial in the spring.

The body was brought to Baltimore late yesterday after funeral services were held in New York. Two hundred admirers met the casket at the station. They escorted it, with relatives and friends, to the cemetery, where Rev. Timothy K. Kenney read the service.

It was Father Kenney who assisted at the famous baseball figure's marriage here in 1902 to Blanche Sindall.

Art. 4—All championship games shall be held as provided in the constitution of this association.

Art. 5—The country shall be divided up into districts with a supervisor to handle the official business of the league within the district.

Love Birds Small Parrots

Black a "Publicity Hound"? Farley: "Didn't Say So!" Brown: "You Did!"

Did Postmaster General James A. Farley call Senator Hugo Black (upper photo) a "publicity hound" or did he not? Farley's predecessor, Walter F. Brown, said he did. Farley said he didn't. Anyway, there were no hard feelings, for you see in the lower photo Farley (left) and Brown shaking hands after each had had his say at the laugh-provoking hearing of the airmail investigating committee, of which Senator Black is chairman.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Miami, Fla., Mar. 1 —(AP)—For no apparent reason other than to prove it can be done despite all obstacles, Primo Carnera fights Tommy Loughran tonight in defense of the world's heavyweight championship 15 rounds or less, weather permitting.

The 258-pound Italian giant ruled a 3 to 1 favorite to beat the 185-pound American challenger, and it was even money he would win by a knockout.

Doomed to financial failure from the outset by a combination of circumstances, the fight has been hit hard by several days of unruly weather, and was postponed yesterday because of rain.

Financial Flop

Officials of Madison Square Garden of New York, promoting the fight, declared today most of the 2,000 ringside seats at $20 each had been sold or reserved. Even so it was unlikely the net gate receipts would go far beyond the $50,000 mark. The attendance, cash and on the cuff, may not pass 25,000.

For a heavyweight title battle this would be the lowest "gate" in more than 30 years, conrasting sharply with the glamorous $400,000 fistic show that followed Tex Rickard's first invasion of this tropical resort in 1929.

Despite an extraordinary "build-up" for the popular and clever but light hitting Loughran's chances, insiders consider Carnera a sure thing to win, probably by a knockout inside six or eight rounds.

Plan Baer Match

One of the things that reflects confidence in the outcome is the fact tha plans already are pending to match Carnera with his motion picture rival, Max Baer, for the big outdoor title fight of the year in New York.

Loughran's following is made up mostly of well wishers and patriots The handsome Philadelphian, once holder of the world's light heavyweight title, has undoubtedly made a comeback. His record of several victories against oversized opponents as well as his training performances have been widely ballyhooed in his favor. It may be that Tommy can contribute another startling upset to the string of surprises spread over the sporting premises during the past year but it is highly unlikely.

The title is about the only thing Carnera can save from the latest of his bizarre adventures. The grinning giant, already in bankruptcy, got some small change for knocking out Jack Sharkey for the championship last summer, defended the title against Paulino Uzcudun in Rome for charity and a medal, and now will be lucky to get training camp expenses for himself and the entourage here. Under the circumstances he might be glad to get rid of the heavyweight crown and go back to free lance work.

Tonight's fight is to go to an official decision by two judges and a referee, Leo Shea, all from Miami. The main bout is to begin about 9 P. M., CST. It will be broadcast by a special hookup with station WMCA, New York.

Georgian Prince to Wed Heiress

Another Georgian prince, emulating the Mdivanis, will marry an American heiress, when Prince Nicolas Tchkotova goes to the altar with Miss Carol Marmon, of New York, only daughter of Howard C. Marmon, famous auto builder of Indianapolis. The wedding of the pair, shown here in Hollywood, will take place March 16.

'NEW DEAL' IS CRITICIZED BY JNO. W. DAVIS

Democratic Presidential Candidate in '24 Speaks Up

New York, Mar. 1—(AP)— John W. Davis, Democratic presidential candidate in 1924, has broken his silence on the subject of the present administration with a criticism of the new deal.

His comment was made at the invitation of the Foreign Policy Association and the World Peace Foundation, which made public last week a pamphlet written for them by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace entitled "America Must Choose." In it the Secretary invited "dispassionate discussion" of the choice of economic nationalism, internationalism or a middle course, but declared whatever the course "a certain degree of regimented opinion" is necessary.

"The farmer who raises more than he can sell suffers in not being fully paid for his efforts," said Davis in a letter to the association. "To avoid this the government steps in and pays him in advance so that he may escape the danger of unrequited toil. All that has happened in the end is that one man's burden has been shifted to another man's back. As a permanent policy it is obviously unthinkable."

German Peat Bog

That fashion in men's cloaks has changed little since the Dark ages is shown by a mantle found by peat diggers in a bog near Reepsholt, on the Ems-Jade canal, not far from Wilhelmshaven, says the Montreal Herald. Its age is estimated at about seventeen hundred years, but the form is not much different from that of an officer's mantle today. It is astonishingly well preserved, as are objects in general that have lain in peat for centuries.

"Old Pete" To Aid in Coaching Young Cub Box Aspirants

Chicago, Mar. 1 —(AP)— The vanguard of the Chicago Cubs will leave tonight for the spring training grounds at Catalina Island.

Nine players, together with Cub officials, Manager Charlie Grimm and coaches, comprise the squad.

Manager Grimm today indicated he would hire Grover Cleveland Alexander, former pitching star of the National League, to coach young pitchers during the stay on the coast. "Old Pete" has been at Catalina for some time, getting his aged arm in condition.

COMPTON NEWS

By Faye Archer

Compton—It is a rather significant fact that all the subjects in the present day high school are described as having a practical value. They have, even Latin has. But before we tell what the practical value of Latin is let us give a definition of the word 'practical' in its connection with education.

Practical does not always mean dollars and cents. Even in that meaning we do find many subjects in the High School; the vocational subjects. Practical, in its broader sense is concerned with developing the individual so that he may know how to live as well as how to make a living. This is the angle from which I wish to discuss Latin.

Cultural values of any subject are indistinct in the layman's mind. Fundamentally all education is cultural in its scope. The cultural benefits derived from the study of Latin are immeasurable. This article will touch upon only one phase of the many in which Latin is of immediate value to the student.

Latin makes the English language more intelligible. More than two thirds of the words found in any standard dictionary are of Latin origin. In our ordinary daily speech we find that half of the words used are of distinct Latin origin. Up until the time we take a course in Latin we frequently have no more than a hazy conception of the meaning of such words as trivial, detriment, discursive and many others. A first-year Latin student spends a good portion of his time devoted to Latin in studying root words, suffixes, and prefixes, which, from the time they are learned, are of daily use to him. Countless trips to the dictionary are saved a Latin student when this close relation between Latin and English is pointed out to him. The general tenor of his spoken and written English is immediately raised in direct proportion to his application of this knowledge. This improvement brings immediate results in any spoken or written work the individual engages in, in school or otherwise. One can readily see why the business world demands a high school education or better of its novices.

The English language contains a large number of actual Latin words, such as census, superior, cantata, emeritus, fungus, hiatus, genius, simulacrum, and many others which have not been changed since the time of the Romans. With a little Latin as a background, you need not run to your good friend Webster for their meaning. The name of practically every modern scientific invention is coined from Greek or Latin. Spelling, the bugaboo of rich and poor, is a highly simplified matter when one knows that "separate" comes from the Latin "separatus," and not from some colloquial "seperate."

A knowledge of classical characters, readily learned from Latin, gives the individual a proper understanding of the frequent refetences to these sources in our everyday life. Atlas cement, Midas polish, Achilles rubber heels, Terraplane automobiles and Vulcan toasters mean more than cement, poish, rubber heels, automobiles and toasters to the Latin student. The story behind each one of these articles gives us a fuller understanding of the qualities of the same. How often do not the cartoonists make use of mythological references in their daily, powerful sketches, which in a few strokes of the pen tell us a story more vividly than an author could in chapters? Without a Latin background we often miss the finer meanings of these interpretations of modern problems. The innumerable references to mythology in classical literature need not be mentioned. We all, at some time or the other have literally struggled through some classical gem, struggled because the continuity of the story was broken by frequent trips to the dictionary or some other reference work.

Many problems of today, problems in which we all have a vital interest now, were live questions in Rome in ancient times. I need but mention a few that have the spotlight in national and world politics today. The New Deal is by no means new. Ancient Rome was greatly concerned with the relation between business and politics; government control of public utilities; maintenance of the army and navy; graft in the business world and in the world of politics; methods of taxation; the race problem; the labor problem; capital punishment; foreign relations lawlessness; suffrage; class privilege; eugenics, divorce; education; religion and immigration. Socialism is not a new problem; it did not begin in Russia. It is as old as the world; was rampant in Rome. An understanding of how the Romans handled these questions in their day would greatly simplify many of these issues before us.

This understanding is yours for the asking. All you need do is take Latin and see to it that Latin is one of the basic courses retained in your school system.

Its values are invaluable.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

FIRST EMPEROR OF MANCHUKUO IS ENTHRONED

Henry Pu-Yi Becomes Monarch in Bitter Cold Weather

BY JAMES A. MILLS
(Copyrighted 1934, by The Associated Press)

Hsinking (Changchun), Manchukuo, March 1—(AP)—A new dynasty was born today under the protecting guns of more than 50,000 soldiers when Henry Pu-Yi became Kang Teh, Emperor of "the great Manchu empire."

A bulletproof limousine, made in America, carried him to and from the imperial palace. Barbed wire stockades kept back the throngs. Everywhere were the soldiers—Manchukuoan and Japanese.

They formed human walls along the five-mile route from the palace to the "Altar of Heaven." For every three Manchukuoan soldiers there was one Japanese trooper in the lines. Thus did Japan, which sponsored the new empire, and Manchukuo itself seek to protect the young emperor from any attempt upon his life.

Was Bitter Cold

It was bitter cold—below zero. At the "Altar of Heaven" the small handful of foreigners—mostly newspapermen, including many Americans—stood in the required evening dress and without hats, literally freezing as they were forced to stand for nearly two hours on the bare earth at the altar.

The ceremonies, both secular and religious, lasted less than half an hour, though for the spectators there were added the rigors of long waiting in the severe cold.

History probably will record the enthronement of the young sovereign as the briefest, most perfunctory and most machine-like ever held.

Despite fears that an attempt might be made on the life of the monarch, there were no untoward events, and within four hours after he was carried from the palace in a three-ton armored car to begin the ceremonies, Pu-Yi ascended at noon his carved ebony throne.

LIQUOR CONTROL AGAIN TROUBLES STATE ASSEMBLY

Fate of Sinnett-Devine Bill in Senate is Problematical

Springfield, Ill., Mar. 1 —(AP)—Liquor problems which were disposed of several weeks ago have again come to the front in the legislature as it struggles to solve school relief and mortgage moratoria.

The Senate has on its calendar a House bill permitting the sale of beer over bars, a measure which caused much trouble for the Assembly when liquor control was the one subject under consideration.

The House soon will act on a redraft of the old Powers amendment. This bill would require distillers to label whiskey as imitation uness it contained at least 75 per cent of pure spirits aged in wood four years.

These two ideas caused much trouble when the Assembly had nothing other than liquors under consideration. Both were killed only after Governor Horner had insisted they be left out of the control bill.

In order to satisfy the proponents of the two ideas, however, the second session was not adjourned when the third session was called, the two now running concurrently.

Fate Problematical

The Governor has again insisted the ban on beer over bars now contained in the liquor control law shall not be removed. Its repeal passed the House almost unanimously and it has many proponents in the Senate. Whether the administration can prevent its enactment in the upper chamber is problematical.

The World's Fair enabling bills, on which the Assembly completed action last week, were signed yesterday by Governor Horner, as were also the measures containing the re-financing program of the Chicago Board of Education.

The House disposed of several issues yesterday while 700 Chicago school teachers, seeking financial relief for the educational systems sat in the galleries. It sent to the Senate a series of bills changing the amount of bond treasurers of various political sub-divisions are required to give. A measure forbidding the state liquor commission to make trips into other states or foreign nations to study liquor control passed.

Bills designed to aid the state in taking advantage of federal monies in housing programs were also approved.

Fees Reduced

Another set of measures sent to the Senate reduce the cost of filing chattel mortgages from a $3 to $5 feet to as low as 50 cents. This last was designed to lower the cost of recording chattel mortgages by farmers.

A legislative committee, authorized by the first special session early last fell, met and organized for its investigation of the policies and expenditures of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission. Senator L. O. Williams, Clinton Democrat, was elected chairman and Rep. W. C. Cheynoweth, Decatur Republican, secretary.

The committee conferred with Governor Horner, who told the members he desired 'a full inquiry.' The Governor, reiterating his confidence in the Relief Commission, said he was especially concerned that relief costs had not been lowered despite the fact that thousands of men were taken from the rolls and placed on CWA payrolls.

SHIRES, DEAN BETTER LOOK TO LAURELS

Athletics Rookie Pitcher Looks Like Most Talkative Player

Hot Springs, Ark., Mar. 1 —(AP)—Art Shires, the talking ballplayer, had better look to his oral laurels because George Moyer is headed for the big leagues.

Moyer, a visitor at the baseball school here, admitted he was just one of Connie Mack's rookie pitchers, but added nonchallently that he contemplated winning 30 games for the Athletics this season.

After he stated he thought Dizzy Dean, a member of the school's faculty and a National League pitcher, was a "fair" hurler, and that Burleigh Grimes couldn't show him a thing about pitching, Moyer was asked to demonstrate his ability.

"How do you throw your curve ball?" asked Ray Doan, director of the school.

Defied Faculty

Moyer grabbed a ball, hooked his long lean fingers around the horsehide and defied members of the school to take it from his grasp. Two attempted and failed.

"Let's see your windup and follow through," Dizzy Dean requested.

"I don't need a windup, but have a look at this follow through" replied Moyer as he went through the motions of a contortionist, and finally ended by balancing precariously on his left foot.

"What would you do if the batter hit a line drive back at you when you are in that position?" Dean queried.

"Oh, they won't hit 'em back when I'm pitching," replied Moyer.

"The Twelve Godfathers"

"The Twelve Godfathers" was a English expression for a jury. It was a taunt to say, "You will be christened by 12 godfathers some day before long."

AERIAL RESCUE OF 101 RUSSIAN FOLKS PLANNED

They Are Marooned on Ice Floe in Behring Straits

Moscow, March 1—(AP)—A Russian rescue commission laid plans today to extend to Alaskan bases, if necessary, an expedition to save 101 men and women marooned on an ice floe in the Bering Straits, off northern Siberia.

Ten members of the Wrangel Island expedition whose vessel, the Cheliuskin, sank February 13, are reported to be suffering severely from weakness and exposure. Two small children are among them.

"It is not merely a question of rescue now, but the speediest possible rescue," said V. V. Kuybysheff, head of the commission.

Three Russian aviators, one of whom flew to the aid of Jimmy Mattern when he cracked his plane in a forced landing on his round-the-world flight, arrived in New York yesterday with orders to proceed to Washington and await orders from Moscow.

Kuybysheff said they may be sent to Alaska to attempt an aerial rescue from Nome. The position of the castaways was last reported as 68.25 north latitude, 173.9 west longitude, approximately 200 miles due west of Point Hope, the nearest Alaskan territory.

ONLY FOUR REP. EX-CONGRESSMEN SEEK ELECTION

Seven Incumbent Representatives Entered for Primaries

Springfield, Ill., Mar. 1 —(AP)—Only four of the Republicans who used to sit in Congress from downstate districts are attempting to regain their seats during the political uncertainties of 1934.

Meanwhile seven of the incumbent Congressmen and two new Republican aspirants have no campaign problems for the April 10 primary. They are unopposed for the nomination.

Three of the Republicans attempting a come-back were swept out of office by the Roosevelt landslide of 1932. They are Burnett M. Chiperfield of Canton, John C. Allen of Monmouth and William R. Johnson of Freeport. The latter two are veterans of four terms each. The fourth is Frank H. Funk of Bloomington, who served three terms in the national House and dropped out in 1927. All have primary opposition, with five competing with Funk.

In several other downstate districts, displaced Republicans are not taking any active part in the 1934 campaign.

Six Unopposed

Six of the Democratic incumbents are unopposed at the primary. They are Chester Thompson of Rock Island, J. LeRoy Adair of Quincy, James A. Meeks of Danville, Donald C. Dobbins of Champaign, William W. Arnold of Robinson and Caude V. Parsons of Golconda.

Everett M. Dirksen of Pekin is the only Republican Congressman whose nomination was conceded.

Two other Republicans are unopposed, however. One is Warren E. Wright of Jacksonville, who was given a clear field in the district represented by Speaker Henry T. Rainey. The other is Jesse R. Brown of Alton, former Circuit Judge, who is trying his political fortunes in the congressional race.

Rainey Opposed

Like most of the others, Rainey has primary competition. His opponent is James H. (High Hat Jr.) Kirby of Petersburg, former State Representative.

One of the new candidates is John G. Millhouse of Litchfield, a former State Director of Mines and Minerals. He is in the field for the Springfield district, which has been unrepresented since J. Earl Major of Hillsboro resigned last year to become a Federal District Judge.

Frank R. Reid of Aurora, a Republican, is the only member of the Illinois delegation who is not a candidate this year.

Congressional entries are most numerous in Cooke county and in the northern part of the state. In most of the central and southern districts, from one to three men are in each race for nomination.

In the Chicago districts, Stanley Henry Kunz, a Democrat, is the only former Congressman attempting a come-back.

The City of Panama

The City of Panama is the capital of the republic of Panama and is entirely in Panaman territory and under Panaman jurisdiction. The Canal Zone, which is a United States military reservation, has its boundary drawn so as to exclude Panama City at the Pacific end of the canal and the City of Colon at the Atlantic end.

CHAPTER I

IT all began some 30 years ago when a young Englishman saw a maid, Mary Marriage, in the upper hall of an old place that is well known in England. It was a spring day and perhaps that had something to do with it and she had a fine prettiness that he was to learn was not echoed in her mind or speech.

He kissed her and, because he was young, he confused passion and love, it is done often. He kissed her again "I love you," he said, "and I don't care who knows it!"

Then he looked up at the old portraits on the walls of the spacious hall and something of tradition and set habit that they implied made him suggest a meeting that night beyond the grounds. Mary, poor child, was willing. He was of the gentry and she of the servant class. One said "Yes" and "Thank you" to one's betters. She stood plucking at the edge of her apron, even then—through the gift of two kisses—lost to love.

A month later the village and the tenants celebrated the young man's twenty-first birthday. With that done he announced his intention of "seeing the world a bit" and started for Italy where he had sent Mary.

In Italy they both learned the length of the stretches between passion which, while indulged obliterates differences. And futilely they strove to hold that which had never been theirs save through imagination by with forced hollow echoes of his old want for her and she with pitiably little attempts at "conversation."

When she told him about "the baby" he grew up. Something that was good for him happened to him when he saw her sitting before him sagged and humble and utterly at his mercy. He covered his young eyes then to shut her out but he still saw her and heard her saying without words to him, "And what will you be doing with me now?"

He knew by that time that he couldn't marry her. She had never expected that and her lack of expecting it added to the burden he had assumed so easily. The title that would be his some day and her memories of her own life of work had made her the more his servant and him the greater cad.

"I'll send you away," he promised, "and I'll always care for you and the child."

She whispered a shaken "Thank you," and began to cry from relief. For she knew from night after night of lying awake thinking of it, that her place with the decent folk of home was gone. She couldn't go back to them now. They wouldn't have her.

• • •

THE young man meant to keep that promise but the uncertainties that are life made him break it. They both returned to England but to different sections of the land and by different trains.

"You see, Mary, it's quite changed now. I'm sorry but, but now it hurts me to see you."

"Yes, sir! I know, sir." It hurt her too to see him now.

And as the spring came again and summer followed he found himself to be increasingly uncomfortable. England is not large. It would be better to have Mary in another country. He thought of the States, so big and far away.

Mary sailed for New York in December and one day when the sea was high and the sky was bleak with gray she died giving birth to a son.

The passengers were shocked and sobered but none of them felt the tragedy so fully as did Conception and Belen Villaverde, two young Cuban girls traveling under the chaperonage of a poor relation.

"The small boy baby will be returned to his father?" Conception questioned the while she wiped brown eyes that filled easily with tears.

The aunt lifted her fat shoulders. "Dios mio! And how?" she questioned in turn. "The lady was registered only from England and England while small, can be large when a child of this nature seeks its remaining parent."

Mary's status had been clear almost from the start of the voyage. She had been "shamed to the sinning heart" of her and it showed.

"What then will become of it the baby?" asked Belen, with unusual energy for a daughter of the tropics. She had leanings to good deeds a love of adventure and why not? Senor Villaverde had means. To adopt the baby, that would entertain she reasoned, remembering long, hot afternoons when there seemed nothing to do but to wave a fan and yawn. She made her suggestion to Conception who was enchanted. The baby was of utter whiteness a mark of real distinction in Cuba where the color of skin with other hues is often obscured as night falls.

• • •

THE Captain did not at first know what to do about the matter but he did know the length of governmental red tape and how it can tangle to restrict motion. And too he knew that if the baby were returned to England he would be reared in some foundlings home which would be a poor substitute for the one now offered him.

"I will say yes," he stated after full consideration of the danger that he ran. Conception drew a deep shaken breath to lose her eyes. Belen said a triumphant "He is named Pablo Tomas Francisco Villaverde y Blanco!"

The chaperoning aunt shook her head she doubted whether the senor Villaverde would be pleased. She found dread increasing as she looked toward the moment when the Senor and Senora Villaverde would meet her their daughters and this child at Key West.

"Your parents, I fear they will not approve," she told the girls which proved a mild description of what was to be.

Senor Villaverde was at first speechless la Madre was not. "Do you know what will be said?" she screeched looking from one to the other of her offending daughters. "It will be said that instead of an education Conception acquired something else. Would I ask you, any Christian believe this tale of adoption? No! I know the world and it is the pious who believe the worst. It cannot be!"

Conception said she would kill herself if the child were taken from her and Belen joined her chorus. Senor Villaverde y Blanco said he would seek the counsel of a Key West friend who might be able to suggest a foster mother for the infant.

Senor Villaverde's friend suggested Angela a pious crone who, on the Cathedral steps whined for alms. Then Angela was summoned and she came a prematurely old woman with the whining servile voice of the professional beggar. She would care for the child she promised as if it were her own. And that one of her own was an idiot from a blow on the head that she had given him made the promise seem no less real.

• • •

THE small white baby was given to her merciless custody and she departed satisfied that the price for caring for the child would buy a great deal of gin; and Pablito little Pablo the small white baby was to learn nothing of love and quite everything of fear and physical hurt. In time Belen and Conception married and with this done and children of their own their dream of reclaiming Pablito faded.

Thus ended his influence upon them and their influence upon him though the abuse from Angela sustained.

When Pablito reached the age of seven he knew his world well. There was a filthy shack of one room which shook with the wind and grew damp when rain fell. In this was a bed, a broken stove, a make shift table and broken crockery. Also there were Angela's sons all souvenirs of gentlemen who had come and gone.

By the sagging door was a picture that was called (for some reason) "La Santissima Madre de Christo."

Angela's brood were hard upon Pablito. She too was hard upon Pablito and the scars her beatings left on his body made her the harder on him for they brought from her a vague shame that she must still by self justification.

"I give you a home and you rob my own of their bread." What do get for this?" began many of her tirades which ended in yet another scar on Pablito's back. The monthly remittance from Cuba would go in one day for drink and after that was forgotten. "It's charity I give you! Charity!" Angela would scream.

As time passed her ways became known. She was rarely sober the town whispered. The Key West friend of Senor Villaverde decided he must report Angela's evil ways, her possible influence upon the child that had been given her. But he settled to write this letter after a too heavy dinner and after he had penned a flowery salutation his dips turned blue and his head dropped to the desk. There had been too many heavy dinners for him.

For this reason Pablito was to suffer yet a little longer from the wrath of Angela. And then came the night of unbearable agony and the strange man and the new life that was to make him all he became.

STATE HEALTH OFFICERS PROBE DEATHS OF BOYS

Two Morrison Brothers Victims of Mysterious Illness

State health officers are investigating the deaths of two Morrison school boys, brothers, whose fatal illnesses had symptoms similar to those of sleeping sickness. The first of the boys, Albert Nelson, 7, son of Mrs. Bert Nelson of Morrison, died last Thursday, and his brother, Paul, 18, died at the Sterling hospital yesterday morning.

Dr. H. D. Palmer of Rockford, noted pathologist, performed an autopsy yesterday afternoon, following which he stated that it would be a week or more before definite information will be available from laboratory tests of specimens which have been sent to Chicago, from which it is hoped the cause of the young man's death may be determined. Dr. Palmer also stated that the family must be isolated, but that it would not be necessary to close the Morrison schools.

The younger brother's death was investigated by Coroner of Whiteside county and hearing that the boy had been hit with a rock, and because the cause of death was unknown, an autopsy was performed. A blood clot was found in the brain and it was thought this was due to an injury, so a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of death due to an intracranial hemorrhage probably due to an external injury.

Paul first felt sick last Friday, but was able to attend the funeral of his brother on Saturday and church on Sunday. Later in the day, he took worse and a physician was called, but it was not thought serious at the time. Paul took suddenly worse Tuesday forenoon and again the physician was called, and later a second doctor called on the case.

Lapses Into Coma

He was taken to the Sterling public hospital about 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon, for the purpose of having laboratory tests. He became violent Tuesday afternoon, the same symptoms as those of his brother. About 7 o'clock in the evening, he lapsed into a coma. A conference of the hospital staff was called at midnight but they could not determine the cause of his illness. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert J. Nelson, both told physicians of the symptoms of the two boys. Everything was done to aid him, but to no avail, and he passed away.

The attending physician had a long conversation with Dr. Frank J. Jirka, state director of public health, and Dr. H. J. Shaughnessy, state epidemologist and an official autopsy was ordered.

Family Isolated

It was decided to isolate the family until the nature of the disease could be determined. The cause of death was thought to be an epidemic form of serious brain disease, possibly sleeping sickness.

BUSINESS BEING DOPED SAYS EX-SEN. FROM IND.

Watson Charges Roosevelt Fails to Provide Remedies

Wilmington, Del., March 1—(AP)—James E. Watson, former United States Senator from Indiana, says President Roosevelt is administering "dope" to business instead of remedial medicine in his economic prescription.

As part of a substitute program Watson last night called on Republicans from all parts of Delaware to "remain true to the idea of a protective tariff."

"We should unwaveringly stand by the fundamental thought of individual liberty as manifested in individual initiative, thrift and individual effort," he said at a rally. "The enterprise and success of the units promote the enterprise and success of the community and this in turn spells the enterprise underlying our government."

Criticizing the civil works program as a dole which many workers find more attractive than their regular jobs, he said: "We have already seriously invaded constitutional principles and if the present rate of spending continues we shall find that we have more nearly approached bankruptcy than many of us dream."

The Color Sergeant

The color sergeant is a rank peculiar to the British army, created in 1813 at Wellington's request, and till 1915 the senor N. C. O. of a company. One particular duty of the color sergeant is that of attending the colors. The original distinctive badge was a color supported by two cross-words and ensigned with a crown worn above the chevrons on the tunic. In 1915 a new rank, that of warrant officer class 2, was created and generally the senior of the color sergeants of a double company was promoted thereto.

May Festivals

Festivals have been held on the first of May from a very early period. This season of the year is regarded as a time of gladness when people are influenced by the thought of new life. Among the Romans the spirit was embodied in the Floralia or Floral games held from April 28 to May 3. The Celts celebrated the day with the Beltein or Baal's Fire.

Striking contrasts in comfort and lack of it are shown in the top photos, of Pilot Robert Coulter, left, in his heated cabin on a Boeing commercial plane, and Capt. John Whitely in the open cockpit of his army plane, flying the mails. Equally striking evidence are the instrument panels shown below, with the twin motored commercial plane's panel at left, carrying 58 devices for safety and control, and that of the single-motored army craft, right, with only about a dozen.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JESUS' TESTIMONY ABOUT HIMSELF

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.

What did Jesus say concerning himself? It is instructive to note that when John the Baptist, who had been thrown into prison, sent his disciples to Jesus inquiring whether he was the Messiah, whose coming John and predicted, and for whom he had prepared the way, Jesus did not answer by making great claims for himself, or by speaking in any theological and metaphysical terms, such as historic Christianity and the great creeds have used.

It was in accordance with the simple life and teaching of Jesus that he should point to the outward evidences and send the disciples back to John to report the things that they had heard and seen.

Christians everywhere since the day when Jesus was on earth had interpreted the divine character of te Master and expressed their belief in him by emulating his example in loving thoughts and in good deeds, what a different world we should have and how much nearer the great organize forces of religion would have been to the realization of God's will!

It is not in theories concerning Jesus, but in the fact of the response to his life, that men recognize his divinity and find life in him.

It is futile for us to speak in honor of our Master except as we honor him by following him and making our lives like his. It is as true today as it was in the day of Jesus himself that the spirit of Christ is manifest in acts and works of blessing.

Those who live in the spirit of Jesus cannot ignore the blind and the deaf and the lame, the sick and the sinful. No correctness of theory, no soundness of doctrine will make our lives speak forth the glory of God and the praise of Jesus unless our words of faith and profession are backed up by lives of love an usefulness toward our fellow men.

Here in human life was the testing ground of the divinity of our Master, and here in human life is the testing ground of all who would share that divine life with him.

How accurately Jesus describes the people of his own generation, their prejudices and insistences on unimportant things, and their carelessness and perverseness in the presence of truth! Is our generation very different?

Do not the great mass of our people still cavil, and complain, and enter into controversy over unimportant things, neglecting the soul of truth and the presence of the Master who still would lead us into lives and acts of love and goodness?

Wisdom still is justified by her children.

From this picture of Jesus and his own generation, how inspiring it is to turn to Jesus Himself, in the prayer of thankfulness to his Father and his simple appeal to all who would find in him rest from their labors and the blessedness of bearing his yoke.

What a strange invitation it is that Jesus gives to men in His offer of rest through bearing the yoke; yet that is how rest really comes to men.

It is not in the shirking of responsibility, not in getting away from their fellow men, from life, that men find rest, but it is in the communion that brings to men the sense of a great peace and a new strength to bear their burdens.

That is what yokes are for, to make the burden lighter and more easily borne.

Negro of Fowl World

A breed known as the "Silky" is said to be the only negro of the fowl world. This breed used to be quite common in Java and in some parts of northern Asia. It has also been bred in South America. The commonest of these fowls with pigmented skin have soft white feathers, although they have been bred with black plumage.
